4 — Second-order: MiroFish agent reaction

(1) Community pressure will concentrate on inner-city areas with vulnerable families facing reduced benefits. (2) Three concrete interventions are: - Targeted assistance such as utility subsidies and emergency food supplies for vulnerable families. - Prevention spending on services like job training programs and affordable housing initiatives. - Expanding public health campaigns to include mental health support resources.

Planning priors are transparent and illustrative; replace with local evaluation data before any spend. No individual-level inference. Aggregate place-level only.
